Warren Lumberjacks vs. DeWitt Dragons

GAME PREVIEW

October 18, 2013

It's hard to believe, but the 2013 Lumberjack Football regular season is over halfway through. The Lumberjacks are 3-3 on the year, but more importantly are 3-0 in 8-4A Conference play.

This week, the Orange and Black finally get to come back home to the fortress that is Jim Hurley, Jr. Stadium. The DeWitt Dragons are coming to town in what promises to be the second big test for the Lumberjacks in conference play.

DeWitt has always been a team that presents problems for Warren. They tend to play up to the Jacks year in and year out.

Warren enters this ball game with a significant power in confidence after defeating Dumas last week handily. The Lumberjacks showed off their offensive prowess by scoring three touchdowns on the first four plays while in the Bobcat delta. Drake Jones was on the money with almost every pass. He connected with Darveon Brown, Peyton Hargis, and Jaylon Marshall multiple times on the night.

The real surprise was that of sophomore running back Trent Broughton who had undoubtably his best game so far of the season and of his career. Broughton was not only a true speed threat, but took a new aspect of his game, patience, to good use. With the help of his offensive line, Broughton found gap after gap in the Dumas defense and exploited it almost every single time.

Warren's defense took about three snaps of the football to really get into the game, and truth be told, once the offense was four plays into the game the defense realized it wasn't going to be needed much longer. With a fast mercy rule into effect the entire defensive squad was able to take a full game breather.

As the Jacks come into this week the biggest concern must be on the teams mental focus and weekly preparation. As Coach Hembree mentioned in his "The Bo Show" interview, having played some week competition recently, he has been working to make sure his starting depth chart players are prepared mentally and physically for what could be a tough ball game against DeWitt.

Kilay Cox, the Flagship running back, is due to return to the field this week after being given another week of rest against the struggling Dumas football team. Cox could get a solid amount of touches and is sure to be excited to be back in the game. Having Broughton could still be a huge help to the recovering Cox.

DeWitt is a team that in the past has given the Lumberjacks some fits, but they are coming off of a 1-8 season in 2012. They've been in a downturn for more than a decade having not made the playoffs since the year 2000.

Lead by quarterback Dawson Moser and running back Jeremy Smith the Dragons will be looking to get the running game going early after seeing the Lumberjacks struggle so much with it in the first half against Star City.

Warren put up 36 points on DeWitt last season. DeWitt this year is hoping to hold Warren's powerful offense as silent as possible, but if the Jacks can establish the running game, it could spell good news for Warren fans.

This game will be carried LIVE on salineriverchronicle.com

FRIDAY NIGHT PINK OUT

by Beverly Reep

We are now in our fifth year as a nation to strive to raise breast cancer awareness by hosting PINK OUT Days at local high schools and communities. This Friday, Warren High School will go PINK. Students will not only show school spirit by dressing in pink on Friday, they will also host several activities as part of their work. The Warren High School Student Council and the

Terri's daughter Ellese at PINK OUT

Southeast Arkansas Community-based Education Center's HOSA program will conduct other activities in conjunction with the Pink Out day. At 6:00 p.m., HOSA and Student Council will host a tailgate party of pink cookies and pink lemonade for all breast cancer survivors and their families. Fans have been asked to wear pink to the game, and HOSA members will hand out pink ribbons to fans as they come through the gates. Breast cancer survivors and those who are not longer with us, will be honored on a large banner at the South end of the football field. In addition, breast cancer survivors will be recognized during the game. The football team will wear pink socks. Cheerleaders have pink palms, and the field will be decorated with pink.

The student council contacted the Dewitt Dragons, and as they have done in the past, they are joining Warren in our special breast cancer awareness night. It should be quite an event: nothing sissy about the power of pink.

Even still, there are people who do not know how Pink Out day came to be.

Terri Alvino Meyer was a wife, mother of two great kids (Ellese and Evan) and a pharmaceutical sales representative. Terri was diagnosed with breast cancer in her late 30's. She underwent surgery and chemotherapy and within a year regained her health. Although Terri was very busy, she was a large contributor to the formation of the Young Women's Breast Cancer Awareness Foundation. Creating awareness of breast cancer in young women and finding ways to help them deal with their diagnosis was very important to her.

Within three years, Terri found the cancer had returned. Throughout the next two years the cancer had traveled to her brain, bones, lungs and liver. She had radiation to her brain, to her eyes, over 5 different chemotherapy agents and hip replacement surgery. She was on several trials and even traveled out of state to research her options. The days were challenging, but Terri rarely complained. She illustrated the definition of strength.

Terri shared her dream. She wanted to make it to her son's high school graduation. Sadly, in June of 2009, Terri passed away before her son entered his freshman year of high school.

Difficult to imagine, this brought about an earth shattering change for her family. As they were all dealing with their grief, Ellese decided to honor her mother with an idea she thought of just weeks after she lost her mother.

Ellese was a high school senior and the captain of the Mt. Lebanon cheerleading squad. She wanted to turn the football stadium pink to honor her Mom and raise money for the YWBCAF. She took her idea to the Mt. Lebanon Athletic director and PINK OUT was born.

The night that they chose was also senior recognition night. That evening, parents escorted their senior students onto the field before the game. What a challenging day for Ellese to be without her mom.

With the help of many classmates and teachers, including Tara Leja, a Guidance Counselor at MLB, they created an amazing wonderful tribute to Terri. The football players wore pink ribbons on their helmets, cheerleaders had pink pompoms and the band flew pink flags. Students were able to purchase pink t-shirts. The stadium was a sea of pink that night.

The entire high school embraced the idea. The volleyball team, the soccer teams, and the lacrosse team all went pink and collected money during games in October.

And, it didn't stop there. Mt. Lebanon's Athletic Director John Grogan emailed the idea to every school in the WPIAL conference. It took off like wildfire. 42 schools participated in the first PINK OUT on Oct 30 2009. High school stadiums across Western Pa turned pink. They honored their own local heroes. These students were inspired and came up with many creative ideas. The most incredible part was to see the passion in the high school students.

So many wonderful things came from this one idea: teenagers stepped out of their "me" world and started helping, and the school created a video talking about breast cancer which they placed online. For Ellese, it also helped take the isolation away from being a kid with a different situation at home.

Her one idea raised over $15,000 she graciously donated to the YWBCF.

Warren is proud to join the ranks of those who work to raise breast cancer awareness. And did you know...men can have it, too?

Wear pink and support this effort.
